

Bootlegger Runs Campaign For Justice of Peace From Jail

Declares He Didn't Know Jug He Was Hiding Contained "Potent White Mule."

GREEN CASTLE, Ind., Aug. 28 (Copyright).—A field inclosed by high concrete walls, lavishly furnished with all varieties and sizes of rocks, with yawning granite pits for cuspids, may not prove a very sumptuous office from which to direct a political campaign. But that is exactly the headquarters assigned to Jesse Nivens, thirty-three, former bootlegger, and now inmate of the Indiana State Penal Farm at Putnamville, near here.

Nivens, a resident of Fontanet, a small town near Terre Haute, is the Democratic nominee for Justice of the Peace of Vigo County. He refuses, although detained here to serve a six months' sentence imposed by a Mayor who was a political rival, to relinquish his nomination.

It was alleged that he had taken up bootlegging as a means of financing his campaign. That he was caught was due to his disregarding the cardinal point in the correspondence school book of instructions, which reads:

"Don't hide a suspicious looking jug in a thickie in broad daylight. Wait until the sun goes down and the moon is absent."

Jesse hid his jug in a thickie near Crawfordville. Some workers saw him and instead of retrieving the container they notified Sheriff Iva Luddington. The latter hid near by and when Nivens appeared he was pounced upon. The jug contained five gallons of what was described at the hearing as "most potent" white mule.

Mayor Earl Berry gave a hearing.

CHILI PROPOSES NEW WORLD LEAGUE

Plan Designed to Meet American Objections.

GRENOBLE, France Aug. 28 (Associated Press).—A new plan for a "World Association of States," to link together the League of Nations, the Pan-American Union and those governments which are members of neither, was submitted today to the Institute of International Law at its meeting here by Prof. Alejandro Alvarez of Chili.

The plan was drafted by Prof. Alvarez for the Twenty-seventh Commission of the Institute, which approved it at an executive session held in Paris from July 31 to Aug. 3.

The new association would be superimposed upon the present League and Pan-American Union, and would seek to encourage regional and continental groups rather than attempt to replace them entirely. It is designed to meet the American objections to the League of Nations, with the primary purpose of co-ordinating the states of the world—not establishing a superstate.
